

Taxation of Investment Derivatives

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Abstract
Acknowledgements
Table of contents
References
Abbreviations

Chapter 1: Introduction

- 1.1. Appetizer
- 1.2. Scope of the study
- 1.3. Fundamental concepts
- 1.4. Methodology
- 1.5. Previous studies
- 1.6. Outline of the study and materials

Chapter 2: Financial instruments

- 2.1. Introduction and outline of the chapter
- 2.2. Classification of financial instruments
 - 2.2.1. Classification tree
 - 2.2.2. Traditional instruments
 - 2.2.2.1. Common remarks
 - 2.2.2.2. Zero coupon bonds
- 2.3. Financial derivatives
 - 2.3.1. Common remarks
 - 2.3.2. Definitions of derivatives
 - 2.3.3. Notional principal contracts, forwards and futures
 - 2.3.4. Stock options
 - 2.3.5. Hybrid derivatives
 - 2.3.5.1. Character and purpose of hybrids
 - 2.3.5.2. Examples of hybrid derivatives
- 2.4. Investment derivatives
 - 2.4.1. Definition and common remarks
 - 2.4.2. Summary of selected investment derivatives
 - 2.4.3. Convertible bonds

- 2.4.4. Reverse convertible bonds
- 2.4.5. Stock index bonds

Chapter 3: Conceptual framework for the study

3.1. Introduction and outline of the chapter

3.2. Concepts and principles

- 3.2.1. Principles of developed tax systems
 - 3.2.1.1. Common remarks
 - 3.2.1.2. Symmetry
 - 3.2.1.3. Neutrality
- 3.2.2. Substance and form
- 3.2.3. Fixed and contingent returns
- 3.2.4. Source and residence principles
- 3.2.5. Paying ability
- 3.2.6. Debt and equity
- 3.2.7. Concluding remarks on basic principles

3.3. Concept of income

- 3.3.1. Generally on income in taxation
- 3.3.2. Framework for economic income
- 3.3.3. Schanz, Haig, Simons and the concept of income
- 3.3.4. Generally on income in accounting
- 3.3.5. Comprehensive income and accounting
- 3.3.6. Concluding remarks on the concept of income

3.4. Accrual method

- 3.4.1. Concept of accrual method
- 3.4.2. Accrual method versus mark-to-market
- 3.4.3. The potential of the accrual method
- 3.4.4. Financial derivatives and mark-to-market
 - 3.4.4.1. Some theoretical remarks
 - 3.4.4.2. Some country-specific remarks
- 3.4.5. Partial mark-to-market

3.5. Realisation method

- 3.5.1. The concept behind the realisation method
- 3.5.2. The status of the realisation method

3.6. Some comparisons

- 3.6.1. Realisation versus mark-to-market
- 3.6.2. Accrual and realisation methods in accounting

3.7. Bifurcation and integration

- 3.7.1. Concepts

3.7.2. Evaluation of bifurcation and integration

Chapter 4: Tax framework for the study

4.1. Introduction and outline of the chapter

4.2. Interest income and taxation

- 4.2.1. The concept of interest income
- 4.2.2. Taxation of interest income in OECD countries
- 4.2.3. Deductibility of interest expenses
- 4.2.4. Concluding remarks on interest income

4.3. Capital gains and taxation

- 4.3.1. Definition of capital gains
 - 4.3.1.1. Capital and capital gains
 - 4.3.1.2. Capital gains and income types
 - 4.3.1.3. Different approaches
- 4.3.2. Capital gains taxation in OECD countries
 - 4.3.2.1. Common remarks
 - 4.3.2.2. Capital gains in the OECD Model Convention
- 4.3.3. Unrealised capital gains and losses
 - 4.3.3.1. Entitlement for tax on unrealised gains
 - 4.3.3.2. Tax deferral
 - 4.3.3.3. Lock-in effect
 - 4.3.3.4. Tax on unrealised gains and losses
- 4.3.4. Concluding remarks on capital gains

4.4. Tax systems and principles in selected countries

- 4.4.1. Principles of tax systems
 - 4.4.1.1. Summary of country practices
 - 4.4.1.2. Specific country notes
- 4.4.2. Interest income in selected countries
 - 4.4.2.1. Summary of country practices
 - 4.4.2.2. Specific country notes
 - 4.4.2.2.1. United Kingdom
 - 4.4.2.2.2. Other selected countries
- 4.4.3. Capital gains in selected countries
 - 4.4.3.1. Summary of country practices
 - 4.4.3.2. Specific country notes

4.5. Inflation and taxation

Chapter 5: Accounting and financial derivatives

- 5.1. Introduction and outline of the chapter
- 5.2. The accounting framework for financial derivatives
 - 5.2.1. Common principles
 - 5.2.2. Generally accepted accounting principles
 - 5.2.3. Elemental valuation principles
 - 5.2.4. Fair value
 - 5.2.4.1. The concept of fair value
 - 5.2.4.2. Fair Value Directive
 - 5.2.5. International Financial Reporting Standards
 - 5.2.5.1. Basic principles of IFRS
 - 5.2.5.2. IFRS for financial instruments
 - 5.2.5.3. IAS 39 on recognition and measurement
 - 5.2.5.4. IAS 39 and investment derivatives
 - 5.2.6. Concluding remarks on concepts and methods
- 5.3. Investment derivatives and accounting in selected countries
 - 5.3.2. United Kingdom
 - 5.3.3. Germany
 - 5.3.4. Finland
 - 5.3.5. Sweden
- 5.4. Correlation between accounting and taxation
 - 5.4.1. Summary of country practices
 - 5.4.2. Generally on accounting versus taxation
 - 5.4.3. Financial derivatives and accounting versus taxation

Chapter 6: Specific tax issues for financial derivatives

- 6.1. Introduction and outline of the chapter
- 6.2. Generally on taxation of financial derivatives
 - 6.2.1. Common remarks
 - 6.2.2. Tax policy issues
 - 6.2.3. Classification of debt and equity
 - 6.2.4. Classification of income
 - 6.2.5. OECD recommendations
 - 6.2.6. Tax practices in OECD countries
 - 6.2.7. Withholding taxes and financial derivatives
 - 6.2.8. Financial derivatives and tax avoidance
 - 6.2.9. Cross-border considerations
- 6.3. Additional tax method proposals
 - 6.3.1. Common remarks
 - 6.3.2. Expected return taxation

- 6.3.3. Retrospective taxation
- 6.3.4. Evaluation of method proposals
- 6.4. Concluding remarks on different methods and issues
- 6.5. Specific financial derivative issues in selected countries
 - 6.5.1. United States
 - 6.5.2. United Kingdom
 - 6.5.3. Germany
 - 6.5.4. Finland
 - 6.5.5. Sweden

Chapter 7: Tax treatment of investment derivatives

- 7.1. Introduction and outline of the chapter
- 7.2. Taxation of zero coupon bonds
 - 7.2.1. Common remarks
 - 7.2.2. Summary of country practices
 - 7.2.3. Specific country notes
- 7.3. Taxation of stock options
 - 7.3.1. Common remarks
 - 7.3.2. Summary of country practices
 - 7.3.3. Specific country notes
 - 7.3.3.1. United States
 - 7.3.3.2. United Kingdom
 - 7.3.3.3. Germany
 - 7.3.3.4. Finland
 - 7.3.3.5. Sweden
- 7.4. Taxation of convertible bonds
 - 7.4.1. Common remarks
 - 7.4.2. Summary of country practices
 - 7.4.3. Convertible bonds in selected countries
 - 7.4.3.1. United States
 - 7.4.3.2. United Kingdom
 - 7.4.3.3. Germany
 - 7.4.3.4. Finland
 - 7.4.3.5. Sweden
- 7.5. Taxation of reverse convertibles
 - 7.5.1. Common remarks
 - 7.5.2. Summary of country practices
 - 7.5.3. Reverse convertibles in selected countries
 - 7.5.3.1. United States

- 7.5.3.2. United Kingdom
- 7.5.3.3. Germany
- 7.5.3.4. Finland
- 7.5.3.5. Sweden

7.6. Taxation of stock index bonds

- 7.6.1. Income classification within stock index bonds
- 7.6.2. Summary of country practices
- 7.6.3. Stock index bonds in selected countries
 - 7.6.3.1. United States
 - 7.6.3.2. United Kingdom
 - 7.6.3.3. Germany
 - 7.6.3.4. Finland
 - 7.6.3.4.1. Current tax practice
 - 7.6.3.4.2. Commentary on domestic practice
 - 7.6.3.5. Sweden
 - 7.6.3.5.1. Current tax practice
 - 7.6.3.5.2. Commentary on domestic practice

7.5. Relevant cross-border issues in selected countries

Chapter 8: Discussion on investment derivatives and principal tax issues

8.1. Introduction and outline of the chapter

8.2. Discussion on the taxation of investment derivatives

- 8.2.1. Equivalencies and differences
- 8.2.2. Classification of income
- 8.2.3. Convertible bonds
- 8.2.4. Reverse convertible bonds
- 8.2.5. Stock index bonds

8.3. Discussion on unrealised gains and losses

- 8.3.1. Common remarks
- 8.3.2. Valuation and unrealised gains
- 8.3.3. Timing and unrealised gains
- 8.3.4. Paying ability and unrealised gains
- 8.3.5. How do unrealised gains fit into concept of income?
- 8.3.6. Why tolerate increased administrative work?
- 8.3.7. Why bother with the taxation of unrealised gains?

8.4. Issues on classification, structure and accounting

- 8.4.1. Is there right income classification for derivatives?
- 8.4.2. One taxable derivative unit or several components?
- 8.4.3. Should we prefer substance or form?
- 8.4.4. Revision of current law texts or case law?

- 8.4.5. Should we increase book-tax conformity?
- 8.5. Some international aspects
 - 8.5.1. Common remarks
 - 8.5.2. Harmonisation of accounting and tax rules
 - 8.5.3. United States
 - 8.5.4. United Kingdom
- 8.6. Financial derivatives and development in Finland and Sweden
 - 8.6.1. Finland, accounting and taxation
 - 8.6.1.1. Common remarks
 - 8.6.1.2. Considerations before the new Companies Act
 - 8.6.1.3. Development after the new Companies Act
 - 8.6.2. Sweden, accounting and taxation
 - 8.6.2.1. Common remarks
 - 8.6.2.2. Ongoing development

Chapter 9: Final remarks