Description

In this symposium, a panel of leading academics and experts will explore the single taxation principle - currently the subject of great controversy and academic debate. Three sessions will see "duets" of speakers will discuss different aspects of this topic with each other and the audience. The day will end with an Oxford-style debate that is guaranteed to provoke argument.

On the afternoon preceding the symposium, Prof. Stef van Weeghel will start a new series of Amsterdam distinguished lectures in international tax law in a historic building that is a regular setting for PhD defence ceremonies of the University of Amsterdam.

Who should attend?

Academics, judges, practitioners and anyone who has a specific interest in the topic "Single Taxation?" are very welcome to attend this year's event. Participation in the symposium and the distinguished lecture is free, but is restricted in number by the capacity of the venues.
