1. Prolegomena
   1.1. Residence and source taxation
   1.2. Territorial scope and extraterritoriality
   1.3. The nature of the business corporation
       1.3.1. Legal personality
       1.3.2. Why tax corporations?
   1.4. Common and statute law
   1.5. The basic problem of corporate residence

2. The Case Law Test for Corporate Residence
   2.1. Is there a “common law” corporate residence?
   2.2. The Development of the “central management and control” test
       2.2.1. Before De Beers
       2.2.2. De Beers
           2.2.2.1. The test is not place of incorporation
           2.2.2.2. This could lead to manipulation
           2.2.2.3. Analogy to the natural person
           2.2.2.4. The “real business” test
           2.2.2.5. The De Beers judicial formula
           2.2.2.6. The application of the test is a question of fact
           2.2.2.7. The company was resident in the United Kingdom
       2.2.3. After De Beers
           2.2.3.1. Adoption of the test
           2.2.3.2. An alternate test for English companies
           2.2.3.3. Rejection of the alternate test
   2.3. Central management and control: theory and practice
       2.3.1. The force of the De Beers test
       2.3.2. Where is “central” management and control?
       2.3.3. The inactive company
       2.3.4. Multiple corporate residence
           2.3.4.1. Swedish Central Railway
           2.3.4.2. Egyptian Delta Land and Investment
           2.3.4.3. Union Corporation
           2.3.4.4. Unit Construction
           2.3.4.5. Conclusion
       2.3.5. De facto control
           2.3.5.1. Unit Construction
           2.3.5.2. The application of Unit Construction
           2.3.5.3. Conclusion
       2.3.6. Corporate governance
3. Residence in Income Tax Conventions
   3.1. Definition of “resident” in Article 4(1)
       3.1.1. “Liable to tax”
           3.1.1.1. Untaxed income
           3.1.1.2. Governments
           3.1.1.3. Tax-exempt entities
           3.1.1.4. Fiscally transparent entities
           3.1.1.5. Collective investment companies
           3.1.1.6. Anti-avoidance rules
           3.1.1.7. Some final observations
       3.1.2. “By reason of”
   3.1.3. The listed connecting factors
       3.1.3.1. Domicile
       3.1.3.2. Residence
       3.1.3.3. Place of management
       3.1.3.4. Place of incorporation
       3.1.3.5. Any other criterion of a similar nature
       3.1.3.6. A reflection on the list of criteria
   3.1.4. Comprehensive taxation and treaty residence
       3.1.4.1. Article 4(1) contemplates residence taxation
       3.1.4.2. “Comprehensive” or “full” taxation
       3.1.4.3. Preferential regimes
   3.1.5. Territorial exclusions and residence
   3.2. Tie-breaker rules in Article 4(3)
       3.2.1. Dual corporate treaty residence
       3.2.2. The OECD Model Convention approach
           3.2.2.1. The Structure of Article 4(3)
           3.2.2.2. The OECD preference criterion: place of effective management
       3.2.3. Nationality as the preference criterion
       3.2.4. The “best efforts” approach
       3.2.5. Sequential tests
           3.2.5.1. Nationality + effective management
           3.2.5.2. Sequences ending with best efforts
   3.3. Conclusions

4. Canadian Statutory Rules
   4.1. Language and syntax
   4.2. Deeming provisions
       4.2.1. “Ordinarily resident”
       4.2.2. Place of incorporation
           4.2.2.1. Background
4.2.2.2. The 1962 experiment
4.2.2.3. The 1965 solution
4.2.2.4. Transitional relief
4.2.3. Dual resident corporations
   4.2.3.1. Forms of dual residence
   4.2.3.2. Purpose of the rule
   4.2.3.3. Effectiveness of the rule
   4.2.3.4. Application
4.2.4. Corporate continuance
   4.2.4.1. Company law
   4.2.4.2. Income tax consequences
   4.2.4.3. The statutory deeming rule
   4.2.4.4. The Canada-US Tax Convention
4.2.5. International shipping corporations
4.3. Foreign affiliates
   4.3.1. Definition of “foreign affiliate”
   4.3.2. Place of incorporation of foreign affiliate
   4.3.3. Same country residence rules
   4.3.4. Residence and the distribution system
      4.3.4.1. Computation of earnings
      4.3.4.2. Exempt earnings: designated treaty country
      4.3.4.3. Exempt earnings: the case law test
      4.3.4.4. Dual residence

5. Corporate residence and beyond
   5.1. Twentieth century tax systems
      5.1.1. Rethinking the residence tests
      5.1.2. Corporate residence conflicts
   5.2. Beyond corporate residence
      5.2.1. Source and residence taxation
      5.2.2. Shareholders and corporations

References

List of abbreviations

Table of cases