

Doctoral Meeting of Researchers in International Taxation (DocMIT) and Postdoctoral International Tax Forum (PITF)

29 - 30 April 2019

IBFD Head Office - Amsterdam, the Netherlands

29 - 30 April 2019, IBFD Head Office - Amsterdam, the Netherlands

The purpose of the DocMIT and PITF is to provide researchers with an opportunity to discuss their current research projects with leading academics and a select circle of colleagues. Participants benefit from tailored coaching provided by our panel of international tax professors, as well as from feedback provided by peers from around the world. We will also host an interdisciplinary symposium, which will allow four of the DocMIT and PITF participants to present an article written under the mentorship of a well-known tax professor, with the ultimate goal of being published in our IBFD peer-reviewed journal World Tax Journal.

Who should attend?

DocMIT

The DocMIT is designed for students working on their doctoral theses in the fields of international, European or comparative tax law. There are no age limits or requirements concerning the stage of development of theses.

Nevertheless, we expect all participants to have made some substantial progress in their research already and to have a good grasp of their subject, well-defined research questions, at least a first outline of their thesis and preferably some preliminary conclusions. Doctoral students should be at a stage where the external coaching and exchange of points are most valuable.

A maximum of 12 doctoral students will be admitted. Applications will be selected on the basis of the quality and originality of their research as stated in the synopsis.

PITF

The aim of the PITF is to provide a worldwide forum for young tax scholars from all over the world to meet and discuss their ongoing research projects. In order to qualify, applicants must:

- ▶ Have obtained their PhD
- ▶ Be under the age of 50
- ▶ Spend 30% or more of their work time on research-related activities (regardless of the place in which such activities are performed: universities, international organizations, institutes, research centres, etc.).

Candidates are expected to be in the process of developing a comprehensive research project on international, European or comparative taxation, preferably different from the one that granted them their doctoral degree. University professors and lecturers are particularly encouraged to apply. A maximum of 12 researchers will be admitted. Applications will be selected on the basis of the quality and originality of the research.

Interdisciplinary Symposium on International Taxation

Following the very positive experience of the last five years, this year we will once again host a symposium dedicated to fundamental interdisciplinary issues concerning international taxation. Accordingly, four researchers will be selected to write a high-quality paper and deliver a 20-minute presentation based on the paper, under the mentorship of a prestigious professor of tax law with the ultimate goal of publishing it in the IBFD World Tax Journal. The topic this year will be "Taxation and the Digital Economy".

We invite all scholars (doctoral candidates, postdoctoral researchers, fellows and professors) to submit abstracts (no more than 500 words) and draft a table of content on the proposed topic. From the applications received, we will select the best four proposals.

IBFD will make a contribution towards the cost of travel and accommodation of the selected symposium speakers.

29 - 30 April 2019, IBFD Head Office - Amsterdam, the Netherlands

Individual coaching sessions (DocMIT and PITF)

One of the key components of the meetings is the individual coaching sessions. Each participant will present an overview of his/her research project and the specific details in terms of the findings made and/or obstacles faced. Participants are expected to highlight the most interesting and controversial issues in their research and to introduce some questions and/or propositions specifically conceived to provoke discussion amongst the participants. The time should be equally split between the researcher's findings so far and the outstanding issues and questions.

Participants will receive in advance a schedule specifying the date and time of each presentation. A PowerPoint template will be provided by IBFD for the selected candidates to create their presentations. The aforementioned template is designed to help the participants better structure their research, although deviations from it are permitted in order to highlight the relevant issues to be presented.

Participants (or IBFD researchers) with an interest in a similar or related topic may be invited, in advance, to prepare a short input statement on one of the presentations. After each input, feedback by the coaches and mentors will be given. The discussions will aim to cover the individual topics presented as well as the common themes and connections between them.

Methodological sessions (DocMIT)

In addition to the presentations, we will have a special methodological session on academic writing. This will cover important topics such as the object of research, methodology, research plan, selection of materials, definition of the right output and insights into how to get published.

Please note that participation in all sessions is mandatory.

Research stays at the IBFD Library

The IBFD Library has the largest collection of international tax publications in the world. Although research at the Library during the meeting days is almost impossible due to the tight programme of the DocMIT and PITF, we suggest you combine your attendance at the meetings with a research stay at the Library. Please let us know in advance about the length of your stay (to take place either before or after the meeting), and we will gladly assist you with the arrangements and in securing a workstation at IBFD's Library.
