IBFD Launches Tax Takes Video Series: COVID-19 Global Tax Implications

IBFD's Tax Takes video series will provide the latest insights from industry experts on COVID-19 tax measures around the globe.

The economic impact of the COVID-19 pandemic is unprecedented, with the OECD labelling it the greatest danger to the world economy since the 2008 financial crisis. Amongst a suite of economic policy actions, governments worldwide are introducing new emergency tax measures as a means to limit the economic damage caused by the virus and protect their taxpayers.

The Tax Takes video series is hosted by IBFD tax specialists talking through a range of key technical and policy developments with invited leading tax experts. These short 15- to 20-minute videos will provide the industry with concise practical analysis and insights, every week.

The first episode on “Tax relief measures: What governments are doing”, is already available online. Click here to watch the first episode, which addresses important developments in states' tax measures and their wider implications.

Upcoming episodes will cover a wide range of related tax issues, including policy and design issues, the impact on tax administrations, how businesses are responding, tax treaty implications, as well as specific country and regional developments.
