Preface

Chapter 1: Subject of study

1.1. Philanthropic organizations in western democratic society in the twenty-first century

1.2. International tax barriers: the landlock
   1.2.1. Denomination of the landlock
   1.2.2. Non-discrimination provisions
   1.2.3. Rationale of the landlock

1.3. Historic attempts to resolve the landlock
   1.3.1. The Nebolsine Report
   1.3.2. The 1969 IFA Report
   1.3.3. Draft European Convention on the Tax Treatment in respect of certain Non Profit Organizations
   1.3.4. Recent developments

1.4. Attempts in bilateral treaties to resolve the landlock
   1.4.1. Philanthropic organizations are resident under bilateral income treaties
   1.4.2. Philanthropic organizations as a safe haven under the limitation on benefits clauses
   1.4.3. Treaties that exempt organizations from source taxation in respect of income generally or specified items of income
      1.4.3.1. General exemption of income (withholding) tax
      1.4.3.2. Non-discrimination
      1.4.3.3. Income tax deductions
   1.4.4. Conventions that resolve the landlock with regard to gifts or bequests to foreign philanthropic organizations

1.5. Thesis
   1.5.1. Motivation for research
   1.5.2. Object of research
   1.5.3. Methodology
   1.5.4. Thesis

Chapter 2: Terminology and general features of philanthropic organizations

2.1. Terminology: non-profit entities, NGOs, charities and philanthropic entities

2.2. Essential features of philanthropic organizations
   2.2.1. Prohibition to distribute profits
      2.2.1.1. United States
      2.2.1.2. Germany
      2.2.1.3. The Netherlands
   2.2.2. Pursuing a valid public purpose for public benefit
      2.2.2.1. United States
      2.2.2.2. Germany
      2.2.2.3. The Netherlands
   2.2.2.4. Conclusion
   2.2.3. Private and self-governing
2.3. Political philosophy of preferential tax status
2.3.1. Economic theories
2.3.2. Interdependence theory and the tax expenditure approach
2.3.3. The philosophy of pluralism
2.3.4. Conclusion

Chapter 3: Conditions for tax relief in the United States

Introduction

3.1. Legal appearance of philanthropic organizations
3.1.1. Non-profit corporation
3.1.2. Unincorporated association
3.1.3. Lifetime or testamentary trust
3.1.4. Multi-member limited liability company

3.2. Requirements for exemption
3.2.1. Organizational test
3.2.2. Operational test
3.2.2.1. Primary purpose test instead of exclusivity
3.2.2.2. Commensurate test
3.2.2.3. Prohibition on legislative and political activities
3.2.2.4. Private benefit test
3.2.3. Conclusion

3.3. Distinction between private foundations and public charities
3.3.1. What type of organization will qualify as a public charity?
3.3.2. Main differences between private foundations and public charities
3.3.2.1. Prohibition on self-dealing: Sec. 4941
3.3.2.2. Commensurate expenditure test (minimum distribution requirement): Sec. 4942
3.3.2.3. Excess business holdings: Sec. 4943
3.3.2.4. Jeopardizing investment: Sec. 4944
3.3.2.5. Taxable expenditures: Sec. 4945
3.3.2.6. Excise tax on investment income: Sec. 4940

3.4. International philanthropy and income taxation
3.4.1. Permissible foreign operations
3.4.2. Income tax deduction for contributions by individuals
3.4.2.1. Direct foreign operations: form over substance
3.4.2.2. US feeder organization: substance over form
3.4.2.3. Split-interest trusts
3.4.2.4. Attracting funds directly from non-resident individuals
3.4.3. Income tax deduction for contributions by corporations
3.4.4. Income tax deduction for contributions by trusts and estates
3.4.5. Private foundations: how to avoid excise taxes in international grantmaking
3.4.5.1. Determination letter or good faith determination
3.4.5.2. Expenditure responsibility
3.4.5.3. Out-of-corpus rule
3.4.5.4. IRS endorsed streamlining of international grantmaking procedures
3.4.5.5. Scheme for international granting by US private foundations
3.4.6. Practices in international grantmaking
3.4.6.1. Prohibition of earmarking
3.4.6.2. Use of a supporting organization
3.4.6.3. Increasing compliance
3.4.6.4. Donor-advised funds
3.4.7. Conclusion

3.5. Foreign philanthropic organizations and income taxation
3.5.1. Recognition required as an exempt organization
3.5.2. Special rules for foreign private foundations

3.6. International philanthropy and gift and estate tax
3.6.1. General rule: no landlock
3.6.2. Exception: foreign private foundations that do not meet US requirements
3.6.3. Exception: non-resident alien gifts or bequests: landlock
3.6.4. Exception: split-interest trusts

3.7. Avoidance of virtual double taxation
3.7.1. Individuals and the foreign tax credit
3.7.1.1. US resident with foreign-source income
3.7.1.2. Non-resident US citizen with US-source income
3.7.2. Corporations and the foreign tax credit
3.7.3. Unilateral relief for foreign gift and estate taxes

3.8. US treaty policy on international philanthropy
3.8.1. Income tax exemption for foreign exempt organizations
3.8.2. Income tax issues for US taxpayers: individuals, corporations and private foundations
3.8.3. Gift and estate tax treaties

3.9. Conclusion

Chapter 4: Conditions for tax relief in Germany

Introduction

4.1. Legal form of philanthropic organizations
4.1.1. The Corporation
4.1.2. Association (Vereine)
4.1.3. Foundation (Stiftung)
4.1.3.1. Purpose
4.1.3.2. Assets
4.1.3.3. Organization
4.1.4. Trusts (Unselbständige Stiftung or Zweckvermögen des privaten Rechts)

4.2. Requirements for exemption
4.2.1. Organizational test
4.2.2. Operational test
4.2.2.1. Exclusivity test: primary purpose test?
4.2.2.2. Commensurate test
4.2.2.3. Prohibition of political activities
4.2.2.4. Private benefit test
   i. Association and the private benefit of members
   ii. Exclusivity versus private benefit
   iii. Private benefits expressly allowed for founders and their relatives
   iv. Private benefits reserved or stipulated contractually
   v. Benevolent responsibility
4.2.2.5. Operational responsibility
4.2.3. Conclusion

4.3. Instructional provisions backed by harsh tax consequences
4.3.1. Liability for faulty contribution receipts
4.3.2. Retroactive revocation of exemption (control of destination)
   4.3.2.1. Income tax
   4.3.2.2. Inheritance and gift tax

4.4. International philanthropy and income taxation
   4.4.1. Permissible foreign operations
   4.4.2. Income tax deduction for contributions by individuals
      4.4.2.1. Direct foreign operations
      4.4.2.2. Feeder organizations
      4.4.2.3. Split-interest gifts
      4.4.2.4. Attracting funds directly from non-resident individuals
   4.4.3. Income tax deduction for contributions by corporations
   4.4.4. Practices in international grantmaking
      4.4.4.1. Transnational Giving Europe Network
      4.4.4.2. Earmarking of gifts
   4.4.5. Conclusion

4.5. Foreign philanthropic organizations and income taxation
   4.5.1. Tax position of foreign philanthropic organizations
   4.5.2. Influence of the EC Treaty: Walter Stauffer case

4.6. Philanthropy and inheritance and gift tax
   4.6.1. General rule: landlock
   4.6.2. Exception: reciprocity agreement
   4.6.3. Exception: earmarked contribution for specified philanthropic purpose
   4.6.4. Non-resident gifts or bequests: landlocked, but same exceptions apply

4.7. Avoidance of virtual double taxation and philanthropy
   4.7.1. Individuals and avoidance of double income taxation
      4.7.1.1. German resident with foreign-source income
      4.7.1.2. Foreign resident citizen with German-source income
   4.7.2. Corporations and avoidance of double income taxation
   4.7.3. Avoidance of double inheritance or gift taxation

4.8. German treaty policy on international philanthropy
   4.8.1. Income tax treaties: income tax exemption for foreign exempt organizations
   4.8.2. Treaty exemption from gift and inheritance tax

4.9. Conclusions

Chapter 5: Conditions for tax relief in the Netherlands

Introduction

5.1. Legal appearance of philanthropic organizations
   5.1.1. Corporation
   5.1.2. Association (vereniging)
   5.1.3. Foundation (stichting)
      5.1.3.1. Purpose
      5.1.3.2. Assets
      5.1.3.3. Organization
   5.1.4. Unincorporated fund

5.2. Requirements for privileged tax status
5.2.1. Organizational test
5.2.2. Operational test
5.2.2.1. Primary purpose test
5.2.2.2. Commensurate test
5.2.2.3. Other prohibitions
5.2.2.4. Private benefit test
   i. Association and the private benefit of members
   ii. Fiscal transparency of foundations
   iii. Private benefits expressly allowed in organizational documents
   iv. Private benefits reserved or stipulated contractually
5.2.3. Conclusion

5.3. Directive provisions secured by harsh tax consequences

5.4. International philanthropy and income taxation
5.4.1. Foreign operations allowed
5.4.2. Income tax deduction for contributions by individuals
5.4.2.1. Direct foreign operations
5.4.2.2. Feeder organizations
5.4.2.3. Split-interest gifts
5.4.2.4. Attracting funds directly from non-resident individuals
5.4.3. Income tax deduction for contributions by corporations
5.4.4. Practices in international grantmaking
5.4.4.1. Transnational Giving Europe Network
5.4.4.2. Increasing compliance
5.4.4.3. Donor-advised funds
5.4.5. Conclusion

5.5. Foreign philanthropic organizations and income taxation
5.5.1. The tax position of foreign philanthropic organizations
5.5.2. Recent improvements

5.6. International philanthropy and gift and estate tax
5.6.1. General rule: landlock
5.6.1.1. Release of the landlock as of 2008
5.6.1.2. Gift tax on distributions by philanthropic organizations: no landlock
5.6.2. Exception: reciprocity
5.6.3. Non-resident gifts and bequests

5.7. Philanthropy and avoidance of virtual double taxation
5.7.1. Individuals and avoidance of double income taxation
5.7.1.1. Dutch resident with foreign-source income
5.7.1.2. Foreign resident citizen with Dutch-source income
5.7.2. Corporations and avoidance of double income taxation
5.7.3. Avoidance of double gift or inheritance taxation

5.8. Dutch treaty policy on international philanthropy

5.9. Conclusion

Chapter 6: The dimension of European Community Law

Introduction

6.1. Application of EC Treaty to philanthropic organizations and their benefactors
6.1.1. Freedom of establishment: Arts. 43-48 of the EC Treaty
6.1.2. Freedom of capital: Arts. 56-58 of the EC Treaty

6.2. Are foreign philanthropic organizations and domestic philanthropic organizations comparable?
6.2.1. Tension between freedom of movement and sovereignty of Member States
6.2.2. Comparability of foreign and domestic philanthropic organizations
6.2.3. The influence of existing tax treaties versus reciprocity requirements in national law
6.2.4. Influence of the tax treatment in other countries

6.3. Are there any justifications for the difference in treatment under landlocked provisions?
6.3.1. Promotion of culture and exception to state aid
6.3.2. The need for effective fiscal supervision
6.3.3. The need to safeguard the cohesion of the tax system
6.3.4. Combating crime

6.4. Conclusion

Chapter 7: Appraisal and conclusions

Introduction

7.1. Rationale of the landlock
7.1.1. Rationale of the landlock; results of this study 7.1.2. Political philosophy and international philanthropy
7.1.3. No rationale whatsoever for virtual double taxation
7.1.4. Conclusion

7.2. Key elements for a resolution of the landlock
7.2.1. Equivalency of foreign philanthropic organizations
7.2.1.1. Equivalency considerations: results of this study
7.2.1.2. Conclusion
7.2.2. Operational test and expenditure responsibility in international philanthropy
7.2.2.1. Growing importance of due diligence for international philanthropic transfers
7.2.2.2. The impetus of the threat of anti-terrorism financing measures
7.2.2.3. The use of facilitators is not a conclusive resolution
7.2.2.4. Conclusion

7.3. Various scenarios for resolution of the landlock
7.3.1. Public charities: foreign charity is responsible for conditions of domestic tax relief
7.3.1.1. Equivalency test
7.3.1.2. Operational test: expenditure responsibility
7.3.1.3. Feeder organizations’ restrictions for cross-border philanthropy
7.3.2. Private foundations: donor is responsible for conditions of domestic tax relief

7.4. Resolution of the landlock through national law, bilateral treaties or multinational treaties?
7.5. The beginning of a new paradigm of cross-border giving

Samenvatting

Bibliography